

HOTEL STAFF RAISE VALUABLE FUNDS FOR CHARITY

JUNE 2017

Hotel staff donned all things pink and raised valuable funds for a North West charity.

Eight ladies at the Best Western Plus Samlesbury Hotel, managed by Squire Hotels, took part in the Pretty Muddy® 5K race for Cancer Research.

Jodi Masterson, director of operations at Squire Hotels, Hayley Lane, the hotel's general manager, Giulia D'Ambrosio, group quality and training manager for Squire Hotels plus Katherine O'Hanlon, Yvonne Irvine, Shima Djedidi and Natalie Muspratt will all competed in the race at Preston's Moor Park.

The ladies raised more than £200 with donations still being collected. The race saw women jump over obstacles into piles of mud as well as climbing over inflatables, weaving through mesh nets and crawling through tunnels.

“We had an absolutely fantastic time, the race was lots of fun,” said Giulia.

“As a hotel, we were only too happy to get involved, North West Cancer Research is such an important charity and all monies raised goes to a worthy cause.

“The charity is extremely close to both the hotel and a group as a whole. Staff members at the hotel have been affected by the illness and we wanted to show our support.”

Squire Hotels has pledged its support to North West Cancer Research (NWCR) for the calendar year. Squire Hotels selected the charity due to a number of its staff having recently fought or currently undergoing treatment for the illness as well as having close friends and family suffering from the disease.
